of Louis Goldman, after he had served six months of a 15 to 25-year term.

WON'T CHANGE CODE

HOWEVER, the governor believes there will not be a reversal, and, therefore, he is opposed to any attempt to make the code more exacting.

Goldman was granted his freedom pending an appeal on $15,000 bond by Supreme Court Justice William W. Potter. The release did not come to the attention of other authorities until the convict was arrested last week in Chicago, and at that time Justice Potter said he had no recollection of allowing the prisoner to leave Sing Sing reformatory. Since then members of the bench and other officials have been ignored the incident, excepting Attorney William F. Dreyer, who immediately undertook to have Goldman returned to prison.

Goldman was arrested in Highland Park in connection with an alleged $250,000 diamond robbery. He pleaded guilty.

Governor Green's statement mentioned neither Justice Potter nor Goldman by name. It is merely an explanation of the spirit of the criminal code, under which the supreme judge allowed Goldman to go free.

"The intention of the new appeal procedure is to give the code a chance to prevent the release on bond of criminals fairly tried and convicted," the chief executive said.

"Under the old system, when the question of allowing bail rested with the trial court judge almost entirely, time after time the prisoner was released and things who should have been serving their sentences were at liberty.

INTENT OF CODE

"If a person is found guilty by a jury after a fair trial, or pleads guilty to a serious offense, he belongs in prison, whether the supreme court consents to hear his appeal or not. The code was intended to keep him there. In fact, the sentiment of the code, from cover to cover, is to eliminate special privileges to criminals and deal with them fairly but not unduly.

"The code indicates clearly that if a jury found a prisoner guilty on reasonable evidence or the prisoner admitted the crime charged he should under no circumstances be released. It is intended that, unless there is good reason to believe a mistake has been made in a trial on the merits of the case, there should be neither bail allowed nor a new trial granted. One of the code's great achievements is preventing the release of the accused on a technicality that did not affect the question of guilt.

"It is only when there is reasonable doubt to believe that a prisoner was not given a fair trial that the supreme court is supposed to grant bail. A fair test of the code will show few deviations from this rule. Therefore, I do not believe a change in the law is necessary."

Goldman is being held in Chicago awaiting the outcome of the supreme court's hearing on Snyder's request for an increase in the $15,000 bond. His bail in Chicago has been fixed at $70,000.

An investigation of supreme court records showed that never before in recent years has a justice of the bench allowed a prisoner, convicted of a major crime, to go free on bond pending an appeal. The few cases of this nature on file involved minor offenses where the sentence, if served, would have expired before the high court had handed down a decision.

201 JAILED IN DRIVE

Cleveland Latest City to Have Cleanup

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 29.—The crime cleanup wave which has swept many of the large cities of the country struck Cleveland full that last night and early today, when 201 suspected gunmen, gamblers, robbers and thugs were arrested.

All known dives of the city were raided by police and all persons unable to prove a legitimate means of livelihood were placed in jail.

The round-up, the most spectacular in the city's history, followed 13 murders in the final month of the year.

But early today the drive had contributed nothing to the solution of the murders. Of those arrested four are accused but not yet formally charged with actual crimes. One is accused of robbery, two for carrying guns and one for carrying brass knuckles.

Eighteen have already been released.

has unhappily for the moment been deferred.

The gift of a quantity of Dakin's solution by Dr. William O'Neill Sherman, of Pittsburgh, has aroused considerable public interest. It was generally understood that the employment of the solution forms no part of the new measures which it was intimated the King's doctors were contemplating the hope of bettering his general condition. It was thought that the solution would be used merely for the treatment of the local trouble in the chest.

USED DURING WAR

Dr. Sherman, who is chief surgeon for the Carnegie Steel company at Pittsburgh, was associated with Lord Dawson of Penn, one of the king's physicians, during the Great War. The solution was stated to be a preparation of sodium hypo chloride and was used by the allied armies for sterilization of wounds.

While it was noted that the last two bulletins indicated that the dangerous relapse of Thursday had been brought at least temporarily to a standstill, it was felt that the danger had not yet been overcome.

The medical expert of the Daily Mail pointed out the interdependence of the trouble from the chest abscess and the extreme weakness of the general condition. He said that the chest trouble could not be healed without borrowing strength from all the body reserves, these reserves must necessarily have been severely taxed already and now have little to spare. Even that little was already heavily mortgaged for the maintenance of the functions of life itself and these reserves can only recover strength from nourishment and rest. That the king's physicians were able to report a greater disposition to take food and the enjoyment of a quieter sleep was therefore welcomed and formed some ground for hope.

OFFER TO GIVE BLOOD

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Unofficial suggestions that blood transfusions may be used to help King George through his present crisis have come through the scores of offers of persons willing to give their blood in an effort to save the life of their ruler.

"Dozens of people have telephoned me and others have written Buckingham Palace," P. L. Oliver, honorary secretary of the blood transfusion service of the British Red Cross, said. "But there is not the slightest possibility of any one outside of court circles being required for this cause."

"Certainly no one now offering their services is likely to be called on. We have on our register hundreds of people prepared to signal themselves to blood transfusion in any type of case. They have already undergone preliminary blood tests and have been grouped. One of these would be called on before anybody now making an offer, but, as I have said, there is not a chance in a million of any one outside of court circles being required."

SAYS ANXIETY GROWS

LONDON, Dec. 29.—An early edition of the Evening News said today that in uphill battle for life, King George was not helping his own. The paper said that anxiety concerning the King's condition had increased on this the forty-third day of his illness.

CALENDAR HOUND KNOWS DAY OF WEEK

Michigan Dog Can Always Tell When Saturday Rolls Around

CADILLA", Mich., Dec. 31.—A "calendar hound" owned by Dr. J. F. Carrow, of Cadillac, is the newest entrant for fame in the kingdom of canine wonders.

"Doc" was just an ordinary hound of somewhat hazy lineage until it was recently discovered by his master that the dog can unerringly determine the day of the week. Hence he has become the one and only "calendar hound" known to be in existence, which is quite a jump from utter obscurity.

Dr. Carrow lives outside Cadillac and is a winter sport enthusiast. He has a habit of taking his hound, "Doc," to ride on sundays. Recently he was not at the farm home Saturday, but "Doc" showed up just the same for the Sunday hunt, and returned to the farm unhidden on Monday. Since then he has made the Saturday afternoon trip to town regularly, and shows up early Sunday morning for the hunt, without instructions. He returns to the farm Monday mornings.

Without attempting to explain the apparent ability of his hound to determine the day of the week, Dr. Carrow has expressed a keen interest in the dog's intellectual powers, and is devoting some attention to the canine to determine to just what extent his familiarity with the calendar exists.
