

Called By Death

DR. C. L. M. HARRIS, ORGANIST, IS DEAD

Was Founder of the Harris
Orchestral Club; Had Brilliant Career

Word was received here last night of the death at Port Huron, Mich., of Dr. C. L. M. Harris, organist and choirleader of St. George's Episcopal Church there, and formerly of Hamilton. About two years ago he suffered a stroke and had been gradually failing since that time.

The news of Dr. Harris' death will bring sorrow to many of the older generation in Hamilton, as he occupied a very prominent place in musical circles here for many years and was one of its best known citizens. He was a man of cheery disposition and made friends with all with whom he came in contact. He came to Hamilton as a young man from Picton, Ont., and rapidly made himself known through his musical talents. As a child he showed a remarkable aptitude for music, and his parents encouraged him in his musical studies. Shortly after coming here he founded the Harris Orchestral Club, which still lives in the Hamilton Symphony Orchestra. He conducted the orchestra for many years, presenting to Hamilton people the works of the old masters and the best of current composi-

LATE DR. C. L. M. HARRIS

He was for many years conductor of Harris' Orchestral Club here, and organist at St. Paul's and Erskine Churches, before going to Port Huron, where his death occurred yesterday.

LATE DR. C. L. M. HARRIS

He was for many years conductor of Harris' Orchestral Club here, and organist at St. Paul's and Erskine Churches, before going to Port Huron, where his death occurred yesterday.

He came to Hamilton as a young man from Picton, Ont., and rapidly made himself known through his musical talents. As a child he showed a remarkable aptitude for music, and his parents encouraged him in his musical studies. Shortly after coming here he founded the Harris Orchestral Club, which still lives in the Hamilton Symphony Orchestra. He conducted the orchestra for many years, presenting to Hamilton people the works of the old masters and the best of current compositions. The club gained a high reputation, and its concerts were among the most popular musical events of the day. Dr. Harris was not only a capable leader, but a composer of a number of songs which were very popular then, and some of which are still cherished. In addition to his orchestral work, he was organist and choirleader of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and through choir and orchestra presented a number of light operas and several of the great oratorios. He left St. Paul's Church over 15 years ago and took charge of the organ and choir at Erskine Church. Ten years ago on December 1 he accepted the position of organist and choirleader of St. George's Church at Port Huron. There, also, he took a place in the front rank of the city's musical activities and gave to that city the musical stimulus he had given to this for so many years.

Dr. Harris is survived by his wife and four sons, Fred, Charles, Bert and Frank, all at Port Huron.

The funeral will take place there on Thursday afternoon at 3:30.